Report on the initiative

“Raksha Bandhan with our real Rakshak”

Date – 30th August

Place – Mulund East, Police station, Railway Station.

Raksha Bandhan, a Hindu festival celebrating the bond between siblings, took on a unique and honourable twist this year as students and managers of Department of Life Long Learning and Extensions of VPM’s R Z Shah College tied Rakhis to the saviours in uniform. The heartwarming gesture aimed to recognize and appreciate the significant role uniformed officers play in our society.

On the auspicious occasion of Raksha Bandhan, the students from various classes, as a member of DLLE came together and organized a special event to express gratitude towards uniformed officers. The event took place at Mulund East main police branch i.e., Navghar police station, where students tied the rakhis to the police officers in Khakhi uniform, Mulund railway station where students tied the rakhis to the employees working at the station and also rakhis were tied to CRPF jawans. The rakhi symbolized the bond of protection between the officers and the community they serve.

Uniformed officers, including police officers, military personnel, firefighters, paramedics, and security guards, play a crucial role in maintaining law and order and ensuring the safety of citizens. They fearlessly face dangerous situations, protect us from criminals, respond to emergencies, provide medical aid, fight fires, and secure public spaces. These officers actively engage with communities through outreach programs, educational initiatives, and disaster relief efforts, contributing to a stronger and more cohesive society. By consistently being present in the community wearing their distinct uniforms, they are symbols of trust, especially for children, promoting moral values and discipline. They uphold ethical standards and serve as role models, fostering respect and admiration in society.

The students tying rakhis to uniformed officers on Raksha Bandhan served as a profound reminder of how significant these individuals are in safeguarding our societal fabric. Their commitment to duty, valour, and unwavering dedication ensures that all citizens feel protected and secure. Recognizing their tireless efforts fosters a sense of gratitude and solidarity within the community, strengthening the bond between civilians and uniformed officers.

Those protectors in uniform working relentlessly every day of the year without any leave, deserve an appreciation for their service to us. Thus, to appreciate and show our respect towards them, we tied rakhi to all those protectors. No matter what the gender, we as a human, should thank to each one of them and thus an initiative by extension committee to spread the awareness in the minds of individuals to express their gratitude towards those protectors!
